A nighttime photograph of the Liverpool skyline. The Royal Liver Building is the central focus, with its two clock towers brightly lit and their faces glowing yellow. The building's intricate architecture and the Liver Bird statues on top are clearly visible. To the right, the Mersey Gateway bridge is illuminated with blue lights, its arches reflecting in the water. Other buildings along the waterfront are also lit up, and their lights create a shimmering reflection on the calm surface of the Mersey River. The sky is a deep blue, indicating twilight.
